BOONE'S HISTORY SHOWN IN MINIATURE

Manual Training School Reproduces Scenes With Clay, Wood and Glass.

MODEL TOWN ALSO BUILT

Circus Parade Passes Through it and Elephant Rests Against Church.

The history of Daniel Boone worked out in clay, putty, sticks, pebbles and glass is a feature of the exhibition of the manual training department of the School of Education prepared for the High School Day, which is still being shown to visitors. The replica is used as an object lesson in history and geography in the elementary school.

Boone's life is divided into three periods. In the first he is represented as living in Virginia. The houses are huddled and the crowded population is represented by many putty dolls. Then it shows Boone and his friends crossing a range of pebbles piled high, signifying the Alleghany mountains.

Life of Frontiersmen Pictured

The second portion shows the settlement in Boonsborough, Ky. Here the students have built a stockade. The life of the frontiersmen is typified here. Men are hunting, women are doing chores and washing clothes. A line of these clothes, made of paper, is strung across the yard. Children are playing and Indians are skulking in the surrounding forest.

Rivers Made of Glass

The third division represents the settlement in St. Clair county, Mo. The students have constructed a stone mansion from the porch of which it is said Boone used to shoot deer as they came to drink. The Mississippi and Missouri rivers are represented by glass.

Daniel Boone's daughter and Miss Callaway are pictured by a canoe on the Mississippi river in which Daniel Boone and his friends are rescuing the women from the Indians.

This work is done under the direction of Miss E. V. Dobbs and R. V. Selvidge. Furniture for a room has been designed and built by the class in furniture construction.

Church Supports an Elephant

A model town through which a circus parade is passing was built by the primary handwork class, as was also a house. Visitors at the exhibition on High School day smiled when they came to the last house on the street, which is a church, and saw the circus elephant leaning against it for support.

The children in the third grade of the elementary school also have a house on exhibition.
